Environmental Assessments and Training

Environmental assessments help identify the underlying environmental causes of foodborne illness outbreaks. These assessments find out how and why pathogens get into the environment and spread. NEHA has developed a number of high-quality EA educational opportunities, specifically our NEW credential, the Certified Foodborne Outbreak Investigator (CFOI). We also have the online Foodborne Illness Outbreak Environmental Assessment (FBEA) Certificate Training and an online training portal of over 75 trainings to access.

NEHA has new and improved eLearning!

*NEHA eLearning is now easier than ever to access, and provided FREE to any individual NEHA member. Take courses and complete CEs- all from the NEHA Store. Not a member? Join!

INFORMATICS & IDEA EH VIRTUAL CONFERENCE

NEHA is working to better understand strategies and barriers to the utilization of collected environmental health data and developing tools and training to support local practitioners and their departments in increasing the utility of their data. NEHA partners with CDC's Public Health Tracking Program to cultivate the use of the Tracking Network, leads the NEHA Informatics Committee, and runs the virtual conference IDEA EH (Integrating Data to Empower Advancement) to provide EH professionals with models, success stories, connections, and expertise in data-utilization for local adoption.
